DIAMOND GEMS

THE STARS ALIGN

For the third straight year, the Brewers sent five players – a franchise-record four pitchers – to the All-Star Game. Starters Brandon Woodruff, Corbin Burnes and Freddy Peralta, and closer Josh Hader along with catcher Omar Narváez represented Milwaukee on the National League squad at Coors Field in Denver. Woodruff was named for the second time while Burnes and Peralta were named for the first time. Hader made his third appearance as a relief pitcher, matching Dan Plesac's franchise-record. Narváez, who replaced the Cardinals' Yadier Molina due to an injury, was honored with his first All-Star Game assignment. The American League went on to a 5-2 victory, earning its eighth straight Midsummer Classic victory.

IN THE FUTURE

As Milwaukee's lone representative at the Future's Game as part of this year's All-Star Game Weekend in Denver, Ethan Small pitched the final two-thirds of an inning in the National League's 8-3 victory over the American League at Coors Field. Small was the Brewers' No. 1 selection in the 2019 First-Year Player Draft. He earned his spot on the roster after opening the season with a combined 3-2 record and 1.77 ERA in 11 starts at Biloxi and Nashville.

CINCO POR OMAR

Back on July 3, Omar Narváez paced a 16-hit attack when he collected a career-best five hits in the 11-2 victory over the Pirates at PNC Park. Narváez became only the third catcher in franchise history to rap out five hits in a game, joining Charlie Moore (1980) and Jonathan Lucroy (2013) on the list.

WINNING WAYS

Between June 22 and July 3, the Brewers strung together an 11-game winning streak – the second longest in franchise history. During the spree, the Brewers went from tied for first place in the National League Central to up by eight games in the division. Back in 1987, the Brewers tied a Major League record with their 13-0 start.

BREWERS COMMUNITY FOUNDATION WEEK

AUGUST 20-26 AT AMERICAN FAMILY FIELD
ULTIMATE ONLINE AUCTION: AUGUST 11-25

Brewers Community Foundation Week is one of the most popular and worthwhile events during the baseball season at American Family Field.

The Brewers have designated a special week to raise awareness of the team's charitable arm which centers on health, education, recreation and basic needs. The success of past BCF Weeks has not only generated more than $32 million for the organization's charities, but also highlights the consciousness of giving.

"People understand that it's a part of our culture," said Executive Director – Brewers Community Foundation Cecelia Gore. "It's not only the players and investors, it's everyone involved with the organization – they are all happy to do it. I'm very proud of that."

During each game on the August 20-26 homestand, the Brewers plan something special for fans. In addition, the popular Ultimate Online Auction runs from August 11-25 and features unique Brewers memorabilia packages and once-in-a-lifetime experiences. Fans are encouraged to visit the team's website at Brewers.com.

"It's always a big week of fun and fundraising," Gore said. "And with our Ultimate Online Auction sandwiched around the week, we offer some one-of-a-kind experiences people can do behind the scenes.

"Brewers Community Foundation Week has evolved in a positive way. It has added real value to the organization and who we are in terms of our corporate social responsibility."

The premise of giving like a pro truly befits the spirit and fellowship of the entire Brewers organization. Gore said it's a shared value, be it through time given or monetary donations.

And with 100% commitment from the players, ownership, investors, sponsors, fans and front office personnel, the success of the organization's charitable arm can reach out to more than 200 statewide non-profit groups each and every year.

"We are all-in to raise significant amounts of money to support needy organizations in the areas of health, education, recreation and basic needs," Gore said. "It's very important as an organization that we understand and appreciate that the fans are important and the community is important and our activities make a difference.

"By the money that we raise, we can tell some amazing stories on how it helps kids and families across the state.

"We've earned a reputation for doing community work well. The money we grant through the initiatives offered through Community Relations is rewarding to everyone. I truly believe they all appreciate participating in these meaningful causes."

Not lost in the big fundraising picture is the success of the 50/50 Raffle which has generated nearly $20 million to the cause.

However, due to COVID restrictions, the 50/50 Raffle first returned to American Family Field on May 11. ➜

IN THE COMMUNITY

"We are so thrilled to bring back this fan-favorite," Gore said. "The 50/50 Raffle is a tradition for so many of our loyal fans, and a way that they can directly contribute to the Brewers Community Foundation's mission and goals."

At each game, the 50/50 Raffle winner is announced in the middle of the sixth inning and has until the top of the seventh inning to claim the prize at the 50/50 information booth located on the Loge Level behind home plate. The winning number is announced and posted on the scoreboard.

"We've been successful with the 50/50 Raffle because of a number of things," Gore added. "Our sellers are second to none. They are personable and they get out there with the fans. Other teams are modeling their raffle campaigns along the lines that we conduct our program."

Gore also points to the Leadership Council as being important to the Brewers Community Foundation. This year's Leadership Council includes American Family Insurance, Aurora Health Care, Delta Dental of Wisconsin, Johnson Controls, Lubar & Co., Molson Coors, Milwaukee Admirals, Northwestern Mutual and Wisconsin Energy Foundation.

"Our Leadership Council wants to be more engaged," Gore said. "That's a strong testament to their belief in our work and we are so thankful to this group of local businesses."

CERVECEROS DAY

SATURDAY, AUGUST 21 | AMERICAN FAMILY FIELD | 3:05 GAME TIME

On Saturday, August 21, as part of the annual Cerveceros Day tradition at American Family Field, the Brewers salute Hispanic Heritage in the community, sponsored by Aurora Health Care. The Brewers are scheduled to take on the Nationals at 3:05 p.m.

Cerveceros Day is a celebration of Latino players who have been influential in the sport. And as part of the tradition at the ballpark, the Brewers will wear a special Cerveceros jersey, which is the Spanish translation of Brewers.

This year, as part of the Community promotions, fans that purchase the Cerveceros Day ticket package will receive a limited-edition Cerveceros replica jersey and enjoy a unique taste of Hispanic culture throughout the game, including a special pregame ceremony and Latino-inspired entertainment throughout the game.

In addition, public address announcements will be bilingual and fans will have an opportunity to purchase Cerveceros merchandise at the Brewers Team Store. The scoreboard will also run special player messages in Spanish while Major League Baseball will supply video clips of notable Hispanic moments in baseball.

On his 25th birthday earlier this season, Freddy Peralta came within five outs of pitching a no-hitter.

FREDDY PERALTA

HE'S MORE THAN FAST, HE'S EVER-READY FREDDY

STORY BY TOM ANDREWS
PHOTOS BY SCOTT PAULUS AND GETTY IMAGES

Okay, Freddy Peralta needs a new nickname.

To simply refer to the fire-balling 25-year-old Dominican Republic product as 'Fastball Freddy' just doesn't cut it any more.

Can the Brewers' young star still throw that wicked fastball? Of course he can. But these days, he has several more devastating weapons in his arsenal.

Be it a fastball, slider, curveball or changeup, Peralta commands them all. And at this point in his Major League career, one could chalk it up to unruffled determination and plenty of old-fashioned hard work.

And he was on display for the whole world to see at the 91st All-Star Game at Coors Field in Denver. In his first ever appearance on the Midsummer Classic stage, Peralta struck out the side in his one inning of work for the national League.

"The growth that Freddy has had over the last few years has been driven by him," explained Brewers Pitching Coach Chris Hook. "And he never wanted to be a one-pitch pitcher and has worked his tail off to kind of get to this four pitch mix now.

"And now you see a guy that everybody calls 'Fastball Freddy,' but it's a guy that goes out there and pitches and throws any pitch in any count. And I think that's exciting for him and also feels a sense of freedom with that."

"It's a lot of work that I've been doing and especially during the offseason," Peralta grinned. "I remember the 2019 offseason and 2020 offseason too. I worked really hard on my slider and my changeup too. And it's step-by-step. And now I'm feeling more comfortable and better every day. But you know that in this game, we never have to rest. We all have to be learning something and doing our jobs every day. And it's part of the game. It's how you keep doing well in this game."

Brewers fans will fondly recall when Peralta was called up from the Colorado Springs Sky Sox to make his MLB debut on May 13, 2018 against the Colorado Rockies at Coors Field. Peralta struck out 13 batters and pitched 5 2/3 scoreless innings, setting a franchise record for strikeouts by a first-time starter.

He finished that season with a 6-4 record and 4.25 ERA. Of all big-league pitchers with a minimum of 30 innings pitched, Peralta held right-handed hitters to the lowest batting average (.110). The next season, Peralta made 39 appearances for the Brewers, recording seven wins in 10 decisions, posting a 5.29 ERA and 115 strikeouts in 85 innings of work.

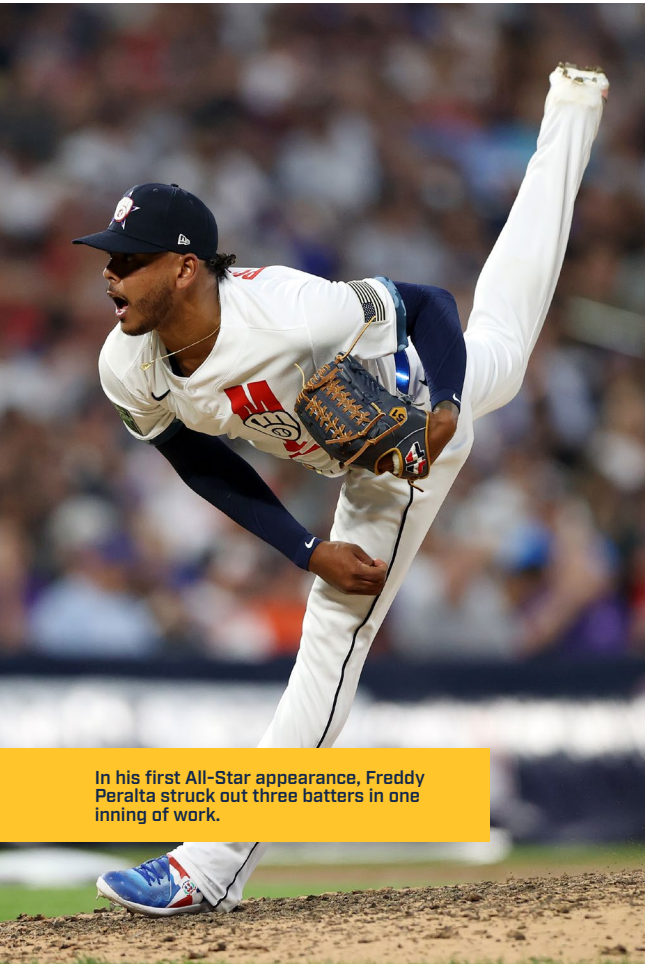

The hallmark of Peralta's success was his blazing fastball, hence the 'Fastball Freddy' moniker. But there were those who were concerned that Peralta might be a one-pitch wonder – just a fastball.

Not the case. After several years of hard work and dedication, Peralta has mastered his trade. And it's driving hitter's crazy.

"I think there are plenty of hitters around the league that have swung and missed at a high 'Fastball Freddy,' but have they swung and missed at a changeup down and away," Hook asked? "I think that's intriguing for them, and obviously it becomes a challenge.

"I think the most impressive thing for me though is the four-pitch mix and Freddy's ability to throw strikes with all of those. And when he starts doing that and controls counts like he has been it becomes good baseball for us.

"We like to watch ➜

In his first All-Star appearance, Freddy Peralta struck out three batters in one inning of work.

Freddy when he's doing that. So now we're excited. I think that the pitch mix overall is something that he has driven himself to get better at, and we're enjoying the benefits of it."

From his crouch behind the plate, catcher Omar Narváez is seeing a very different technique and results from Peralta.

"I think it's been pretty good to get him first pitch for a strike," said Narváez. "And then after that it's game on for the hitters because he really is attacking and he really has improved the slider and a good changeup coming off.

"So I think there's been a complete pitcher from the beginning of the season. It's hard when a pitcher is going to throw you one pitch and even harder when that pitcher executes more than two different pitches. I think that's all he sees and has been trying to execute every pitch and he has been successfully doing everything."

How successful? By the All-Star break, Peralta had a 7-3 record in 18 games. He chalked up a 2.39 ERA and 3.3 WAR in 98 innings pitched. In terms of analytics, he ranked among the top 10 pitchers in nearly every category, including adjusted pitching runs (20), adjusted pitching wins (2.1), base-out runs saved (24.30), situational wins saved (2.9) and championship wins probability added (1.7).

On his 25th birthday, back on June 4, he nearly pitched a no-hitter, earning a 5-1 victory over the Diamondbacks at American Family Field. In the first half, he also pitched in five outings – where he tossed at least five innings in which he gave up just one hit – a franchise record. ➜

FREDDY PERALTA | MORE THAN FAST

Watching opposing batters standing perplexed at the plate, wondering which Peralta pitch they will actually see, has been especially pleasing for Hook and Manager Craig Counsell.

"Well, as far as the hitter goes, they've got to get their foot down and ready for a fastball at 93 to 97, and Freddy's is unique too," said Hook. "It has a bit of a lift to it. It has a lift and a cut to it. So it's not only like they're getting ready for the velocity, but they also have to be in tune with the movement of the pitch.

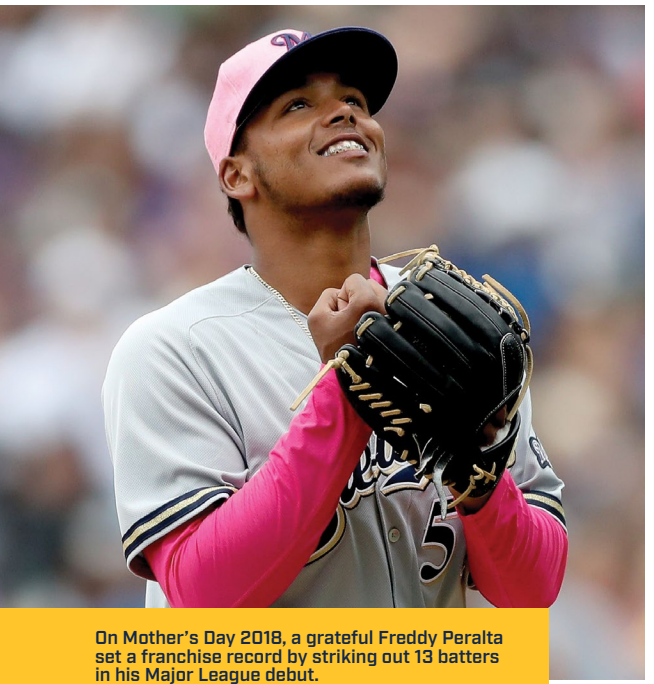

"It's hard to hit. It really is."

As impressive as Peralta's statistics have been so far this year, there is another very important factor that doesn't show up in the box score: confidence.

When you talk to Freddy he exudes a pleasant brand of confidence, secure in the knowledge that he is on the right track but also realistic in knowing that he still has plenty of work to do.

"I can say that my confidence has been growing a lot, especially in those days that I don't feel really good," Peralta shared. "That's the day that I can say, 'Okay, I've been growing' because in the past, those moments were really hard for me for get out of the innings or the situations when I wasn't feeling really good.

"But now when I have those days that I don't feel good, I can say that I've been feeling much better, more confidence. And that helps me a lot. It's been a great process for me."

On Mother's Day 2018, a grateful Freddy Peralta set a franchise record by striking out 13 batters in his Major League debut.

Brewers Trivia:

Who set the franchise record for most stolen bases in an inning?

A] Paul Molitor
B] Scott Podsednik
C] Pat Listach

ANSWER: A) Paul Molitor. On July 27, 1987 in the midst of his 39-game hitting streak, Molitor stole second, third and home in the first inning against the Oakland A's.

JOHN AXFORD

SOMETHING YOU MAY NOT KNOW

JOHN AXFORD – RHP (2009-13)

In 2011, the Canadian-born Axford set the Brewers' all-time single-season record of 46 saves in leading the team to its first National League Central Division title. In the process of setting the new standard, Axford strung together an unprecedented 43 consecutive saves from April 24 through the end of the regular season. For the year, he posted a stingy 1.95 ERA. Axford joined Ken Sanders, Dan Plesac, Doug Henry, Mike Fetters and Bob Wickman as the only Brewers to lead the team in saves in at least three consecutive seasons.

WHAT'S IN A NUMBER?

CIRCLE THE CORRECT ONES

What uniform numbers did Lyle Overbay wear as a Brewers infielder?

A] 11 B] 15 C] 21 D] 24 E] 31

ANSWER: A & D) Lyle Overbay wore two of the five numbers listed. From 2004-05, he wore No. 11; and in 2014, he wore 24.

HELFAER FIELD

TIME WAS... 20 YEARS AGO

August 30, 2001 – The official groundbreaking of Helfaer Field was held on the site of old County Stadium. Standing in the shadows of Miller Park, now American Family Field, the youth baseball field opened in May 2002. In the left-field concourse, a marker designates the actual spot of County Stadium's original home plate. Youth baseball and softball games are played on the field throughout the summer.

STUMP THE UMP

With a full count and two outs, a batter swings and misses at a pitch in the dirt. The pitch bounces off the catcher into the air, and the batter's bat strikes the ball, causing it to roll into foul territory. What's the proper ruling?

ANSWER: Strike three. The batter is out and the half inning is completed. (Rule 6.05c)

RARE BASEBALL FEATS

STAYIN' ALIVE

Any time a hitter can stay alive in an at-bat, he's doing something right. One player holds the official Major League record for most pitches in an at-bat. Can you name him?

A] Luke Appling B] Brandon Belt C] Barry Bonds

ANSWER: B) On April 22, 2018, the San Francisco Giants slugger Brandon Belt had a 21-pitch at-bat against Los Angeles Dodgers pitcher Jaime Barria, which is considered the Major League record since pitch counts have been recorded in 1988. Legend has it that 'Old Aches and Pains' Luke Appling had a 24-pitch at-bat in 1940 but it's unsubstantiated according to the official keeper of big-league stats, the Elias Sports Bureau.

Hi. We're Network Health.

Co-owned by Froedtert Health and Ascension Wisconsin, our role as a health plan extends far beyond the typical processing of health care claims, by providing exceptional service to the neighbors, friends and families we serve.

Think about your experience with your current health insurance carrier. Have you ever said anything like this?

"I love Network Health. Everyone is so nice to work with. Never have any problems with enrollment and always get my questions answered in a timely fashion."

This is a real quote from a Network Health employer customer. It isn't often that you find love and insurance in the same sentence, is it?

When you're ready to make a change and experience a health insurance company with heart, give us a call. We'll help you find an innovative health plan solution to fit your business needs.

GRAND SLAM TEACHER OF THE MONTH AWARD

Help us show our appreciation for Wisconsin's teachers who change kids' lives all over our state every day. Through the Grand Slam Teacher of the Month Award presented by UScellular™, you'll help us recognize standout teachers in Wisconsin who've used innovative teaching strategies to achieve excellence in student achievement. Each monthly winner will receive a special certificate and recognition on our official social media feeds. Any Wisconsin-based educator (any grade level or discipline) is eligible to win. Learn more about the program and nominate someone you know at brewers.com/teacher.

COMMUNITY ACHIEVERS

We all recognize the heroes on the field, but this season, the Brewers and Meijer want to honor the heroes in our community. Through the end of the year, one person will be honored each month for their work in the community with a feature on the Brewers social channels. To nominate someone you know, visit brewers.com/community.

BEYOND THE DIAMOND

Beyond the Diamond is a series of community outreach events that will take place throughout the season. The program is a collaborative effort around a partnership between Brewers players, coaches, alumni, Brewers Wives, and team personnel working hands-on in the community.

BREWERS WIVES

The Brewers Wives play an important role in our community outreach efforts to several worthy causes. Each year, the Brewers Wives give back and make a difference in various ways, from hosting fundraisers to working hands-on in the community. This season, be on the lookout for the Brewers Wives upcoming fundraising efforts. Coming Soon, the Wives Jerseys Off Their Backs Online Auction will be from August 20-26!

BREWERS SUMMER SLUGGER PROGRAM

Summer Slugger is here! The Brewers have partnered with digital learning innovator EVERFI to help prevent the "summer slide" in 3rd-6th graders! All students are invited to participate in this online, baseball-themed learning course that helps reinforce critical math and literacy skills. Students earn points, unlock levels and receive progress-based rewards throughout the summer. Visit summerslugger.com/brewers to learn more and sign up today!

Series Notes: This is the Pirates' third and final visit to American Family Field in 2021. The Brewers have had the Pirates' number at home over the last 15 seasons, posting an 89-35 record, including winning 14 of the last 18 games. Back in 2019, the Brewers registered their 200th win against an opponent – marking the fourth time they've matched that milestone and the first time against a National League opponent.

Pirates Cove: It's going to be difficult for the Pirates to escape the NL Central cellar this season – something they haven't been able to do since 2018. To compound matters, the Bucs were sellers at the trade deadline, shipping off Tyler Anderson (Mariners), Adam Frazier (Padres) and Clay Holmes (Yankees). Now Manager Derek Shelton can test his pitching staff of JT Brubaker, Chad Kuhl and Max Kranick, along with relievers David Bednar and Duane Underwood Jr. Likewise, the offense turns to All-Star Bryan Reynolds, Ke'Bryan Hayes, Kevin Newman, Rodolfo Castro and Ka'ai Tom. The Pirates now look to play the spoiler role the rest of the season with an eye on the future.

Series Spotlight: August 5, 2019 – Christian Yelich collected a pair of doubles and home runs to lead the Brewers to a 9-7 win over the Pirates at PNC Park. Yelich opened and closed the scoring for the Brewers with a long ball. Jordan Lyles picked up the win and Josh Hader nailed down a save.

Series Notes: This is San Francisco's only visit to American Family Field in 2021. The Brewers did not play the Giants last season due to a revamped COVID-19 schedule. Milwaukee has lost the season series to the Giants in five of the last six years, though the Brewers have fared better at home in recent years, winning seven of the last 11 meetings.

2020 Season: The Giants finished third in the National League West Division with a 29-31 record and missed the postseason for the fourth straight season.

Giant Steps: The Giants are the biggest surprise team in the National League in 2021. San Francisco sprinted to the top of the West Division and has stayed there in what may be the most competitive division in baseball. The Giants have a veteran-laden squad led by All-Stars Buster Posey and Brandon Crawford, and the steady play of Brandon Belt, Evan Longoria, Donovan Solano and Alex Dickerson – all in their 30s. San Francisco added Kris Bryant (Cubs) at the trade deadline. In addition, youth movement is slowly taking shape in the Bay area with Mauricio Dubon, Steven Duggar and Mike Yastrzemski finding plenty of playing time. The Giants added veterans Alex Wood and Anthony DeSclafani to join All-Star and Cy Young Award candidate Kevin Gausman, Johnny Cueto and Logan Webb in the rotation. The bullpen is regrouping behind Jake McGee, Tyler Rogers and José Álvarez. It'll be interesting to see if the Giants can keep up with the division favorites Dodgers and Padres during the dog days of summer.

Series Spotlight: August 7, 2013 – A pitcher's duel went sideways for the Giants when the Brewers exploded for six runs in the final two innings en route to a 6-1 victory at AT&T Park. Marco Estrada and Madison Bumgarner locked up in a scoreless duel until San Francisco broke through with a single tally in the seventh inning. But Milwaukee responded by pounding out eight of its 10 hits over the last two frames to account for most of its offense.

Series Notes: This is Washington's only visit to American Family Field in 2021. The Brewers did not play the Nationals last season due to the revamped COVID-19 schedule. Back in May, the Brewers swept Washington in a three-game series at Nationals Park. Coming into this season, Milwaukee had won four straight season series from the Nats for the first time since 2007-10. The Brewers have fared well against Washington at home, winning 10 of the last 13 games, including sweeping them at Miller Park in 2019.

2020 Season: The Nationals finished fourth in the National League East Division with a 26-34 record. Washington missed the postseason for the first time since 2018.

Nats Stats: Since winning the world championship two years ago, the Nationals have struggled to stay competitive in the National League East with the likes of the Braves and Phillies. Expectations had been high but the results low. And as a result, Washington cleaned house at the trade deadline, sending key players like Max Scherzer and Trea Turner (Dodgers), Jon Lester (Cardinals), Brad Hand (Blue Jays), Daniel Hudson (Padres), Yan Gomes (Athletics), Josh Harrison (Athletics) and Kyle Schwarber (Red Sox) packing for a bounty of future prospects. Manager Dave Martinez still has a veteran presence on the mound with Joe Ross and Patrick Corbin while on offense, the Nationals lean heavily on All-Star and defending batting champ Juan Soto, and Josh Bell.

Series Spotlight: August 17, 2019 – – In a bizarre see-saw 14-inning affair, the Brewers outslugged the Nationals, 15-14, at Nationals Park. Five players led the Brewers 20-hit barrage, which included seven home runs. Christian Yelich collected two homers among his team high five hits while Ryan Braun added a pair of homers. Ten Brewers pitchers worked in the slugfest with reliever Junior Guerra picking up the victory.

Series Notes: The Reds are making their third and final visit to American Family Field this season. Following a three-game sweep of the Reds at Great American Ball Park soon after the All-Star break, the Brewers evened the season series at 8-8. Milwaukee has won the season series from the Reds in three of the last four years.

Reds Roundup: Much of the reason the Reds were in the mix in the NL Central during the first half of the season was due to a strong offensive showing that clicked around All-Stars Nick Castellanos and Jesse Winker. The duo's hot start fueled the rest of the offense which included veterans Eugenio Suárez, Joey Votto, Tucker Barnhart, and Tyler Naquin along with rising prospect Jonathan India. Manager David Bell had to piece together a pitching staff due to injuries and got the most out of starters Wade Miley and Tyler Mahle, and youngster Vladimir Gutiérrez. But at the trade deadline, the Reds were in the market for relievers and targeted Mychal Givens (Rockies), and Luis Cessa and Justin Wilson (Yankees) to join forces with Luke Sims, Sean Doolittle, Amir Garrett and rookie Ryan Hendrix in the bullpen. The question now is do the Reds have the staying power to compete for the division title? Cincinnati proved it does, posting a winning record against each rival in the NL Central.

Series Spotlight: August 24, 2020 – Justin Smoak and Omar Narvaéz each hit home runs off Trevor Bauer to lift the Brewers to a 4-2 win over the Reds at Miller Park. Starter Brett Anderson tossed six solid innings to pick up the victory, needing strong relief help from Devin Williams, David Phelps and closer Josh Hader, who chalked up his sixth save.

RYAN BRAUN'S LEGACY EMBLEMATIC OF SUCCESS AND LONGEVITY

Ryan Braun took the Major Leagues by storm in 2007.

When examining the Brewers' first 50 years of Major League Baseball in Milwaukee, many players stand out for their contributions to the franchise's history.

Only when under the microscope does a smaller sample of players rise above the rest. Among the elite of the elite, their success and longevity transcends all others who have worn the Brewers' colors.

Most acknowledge that Robin Yount is the face of the franchise. Many believe he put the Brewers on the map when the organization first searched for an identity. His career spanned 20 years over parts of three decades.

In 2008, Ryan Braun's home run in the season finale lifted the Brewers to a victory and a Wild Card berth.

As a homegrown talent, he truly was a lifer – an honor in itself since few players in the modern age spend their entire career with one team.

During his tenure, Yount won two MVP awards at two different positions and played on the Brewers' only pennant winning team that came within one victory of a World Series championship. He led or shared the top spot in a majority of offensive categories on the team's all-time list, underscored by 3,142 hits. And when his career was all-said-and-done, Yount was the Brewers' first player elected to the National Baseball Hall of Fame in his first year of eligibility.

Paul Molitor also graces that special order, though his accomplishments over a 21-year career were shared with two other teams. Nonetheless, what he achieved in Milwaukee was nothing short of sensational, accentuated by a 39-game hitting streak and a .353 batting average in one remarkable campaign in 1987. Like Yount, Molitor was instrumental to the Brewers' pennant winning era which encompassed several contending seasons. During this period, the success of the Brewers was predicated by Molitor's presence in the lineup. And like Yount, Molitor's name can be found atop many categories following 15 seasons of service. Similarly, Molitor was enshrined in Cooperstown in his first year on the ballot, wearing a Brewers cap on his Hall of Fame plaque.

Now after nearly 20 years, a third player has found his way onto the Brewers' ➜

Mount Rushmore of greatness. In the new millennium, one player demonstrated what it took to be included among these giants.

Following in the footsteps of a Yount and Molitor, Ryan Braun quickly became a fan-favorite, accomplishing great feats over 14 seasons.

"To be in their (Yount and Molitor) company is truly an honor," Braun has said many times. "Just to be mentioned alongside of them is certainly a tremendous feeling of accomplishment."

Perhaps the one milestone – among many that he attained – that stands out the most is when he set the new standard for most home runs. On the very day Yount hit his last home run (August 19, 1993) to put him at the top of the Brewers' list with 251, Braun surpassed him 22 years later (August 19, 2015), prompting Yount to say, "It's about time we got a guy with some real power on the top of that list."

But in his typical gracious way, Braun raved about Yount's legacy.

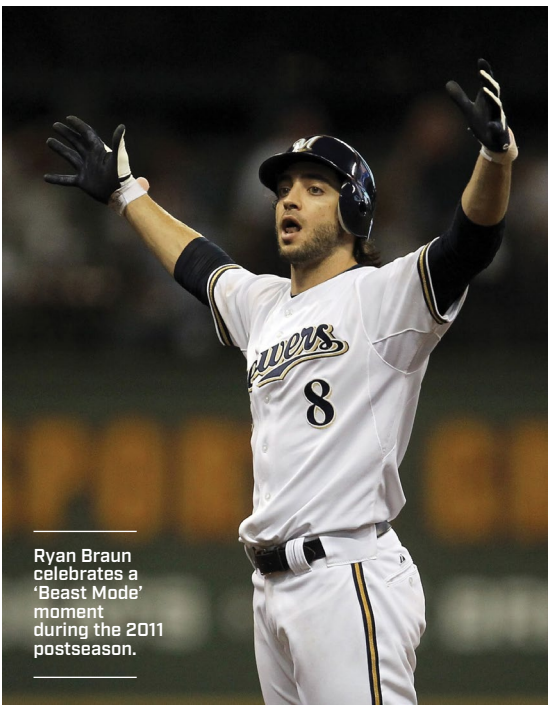

"Robin obviously is a franchise icon, the best player in franchise history," Braun said. "I don't think anybody will ever be able to accomplish what he did in a Brewers uniform. I think the biggest challenge for anyone in this game is consistency and longevity. And you can't accomplish any grand numbers without being consistent and playing for a long time."

Braun's trek began by bursting onto the big-league stage in 2007. Few rookies made an impact the way he did. In only 113 games, he managed to set club rookie records with a .324 batting average, 34 home runs and 97 RBI while setting a new National League rookie standard with a .634 slugging percentage.

For his efforts, Braun pocketed the first of many accolades when he was named the National League Rookie of the Year.

"I believe everything happens for a reason," Braun said at the time. "It's great to be recognized. It's a great award and honor. I'm proud of it. For me, I expect bigger and better things in my future."

True to his word, bigger and better did come his way. The very ➜ next season, Braun guided the Brewers to their first postseason appearance in 26 years. He led the team with 37 homers, 106 RBI, 92 runs and 174 hits while coming through in the clutch, particularly down the stretch when every game mattered to the Brewers' bid for the NL Wild Card. Twice in the final week Braun delivered.

In a tie-game against the Pirates, his 10th inning walk-off grand slam not only gave the Brewers the victory but also drew them even with the Mets for the Wild Card. Three days later, in a must-win season finale, his two-run homer in the eighth inning snapped a 1-1 tie with the Cubs – a game in which pitcher CC Sabathia went the distance. Coupled with the Mets' loss, Milwaukee had its playoff berth.

The following season, Braun joined Yount, Molitor and Cecil Cooper as the only Brewers players to collect 200 hits in a season. His career-best 203 hits led the National League. He also set a personal high with 113 runs scored and 114 RBI. In addition, he ranked among the league leaders with a .320 batting average and 32 homers.

"I said from the very beginning that the single best thing I could do was to have success, go out there and do the same things over and over," Braun said at the time. "The goal is to continue to do those things."

So he kept doing what came naturally. In 2011, he enjoyed a breakout campaign, leading the Brewers to a division title. He was rewarded with the NL MVP award after batting a career-high .332 with 33 homers and 111 RBI to go along with a league-best .597 slugging percentage and .994 OPS.

"I recognize how difficult it was to win an MVP award," he explained following the announcement. "How rare it is to win it. I'm certainly proud of that and I'm just as proud to do this for the Milwaukee Brewers organization and the fans."

In 2012, he added some other trophies to his mantel when he topped the National League with 41 homers and 108 runs scored. Coupled with 30 stolen bases, Braun became the first Brewer to hit 40 homers and steal 30 bases in the same season.

Over the next six seasons Braun dealt with nagging back and thumb injuries, which limited his production, and kept the Brewers out of the playoff picture.

He did have a bounce-back season in 2015 when he batted .285 with 25 homers and 84 RBI while making his sixth appearance in an All-Star Game. In a pinch-hitting role, he became the first Brewers' player to triple in the Midsummer Classic.

Braun made Brewers history by belting his 300th career home run off the Cubs' John Lackey on September 8, 2017.

And with a resurgence of talent led by Christian Yelich and Lorenzo Cain, the Brewers returned to the postseason in 2018, 2019 and 2020. Though his role was limited, Braun did his part, too, while reaching some personal milestones along the way and mentoring young players.

In 2018, Braun became only the second player in franchise history to reach 1,000 RBI. In 2019, he became the fifth Brewer to collect six hits in a game – the first to record the feat with a walk-off game winner. He also hit a pair of homers in a game in which the Brewers tied the team record of seven homers. In 2020, Braun hit a homer to reach 800 extra-base hits.

"For me, the lasting memory will be celebrating with my teammates when we made the postseason," he reflected. "Those are the moments that you play this game for. Just that feeling of euphoria you get when all the work you've put in pays off."

In five playoff seasons, Braun holds the record in several departments, including playing in the most games (27), collecting the most hits (35) and driving in the most runs (16).

"And what can I say about the fans here," he added. "They were behind me all the way. Many players also have been supportive. I appreciate having a lot of good friends."

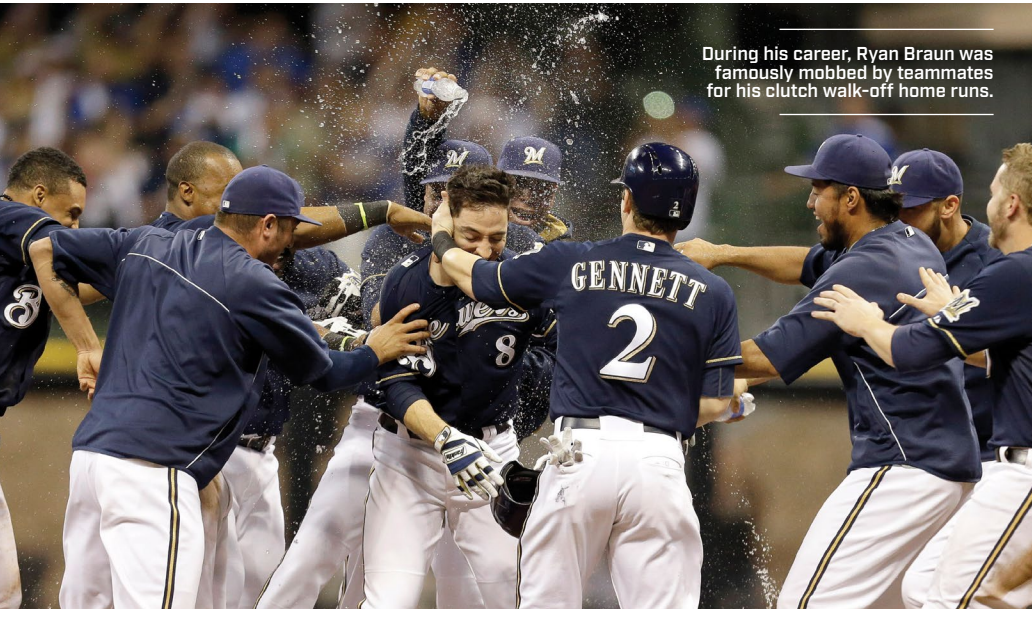

Braun ranks among the top-three in a number of major offensive categories on the franchise's all-time list, including home runs (1st, 352), RBI (2nd, 1,154), OPS (2nd, .891), slugging percentage (2nd, .532), doubles (2nd, 408), total bases (2nd, 3,525), extra-base hits (2nd, 809), hits (3rd, 1,963) and triples (3rd, 49).

And like Yount and Molitor before him, Braun now sets the bar for the next generation.

"There are a lot of really good players right now in our organization," Braun said. "I think competition should help everybody get better. It should inspire guys to ultimately become the best versions of themselves."

As he did.

During his career, Ryan Braun was famously mobbed by teammates for his clutch walk-off home runs.

“ WPS is the whole package. The plan is easy to deal with. When I call and have a question, I get to talk to a real person. ”

BREWERS GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY

CELEBRATING THE 2000S

STORY BY MARIO ZIINO
BREWERS ARCHIVE PHOTOS

In 2007, Prince Fielder became the youngest player in Major League history to hit 50 homers in a single season.

The new millennium opened with a closing.

Brewers fans, as well as those of the Braves and Packers, said farewell to County Stadium, home to Milwaukee and Wisconsin's sports legends for 48 years. But a new dawning was on the horizon with the arrival of Miller Park, now called American Family Field, and the promise of Baseball's long-awaited potential in the community solidified by a state-of-the-art retractable roof ballpark.

Before the prospects of tomorrow, the Brewers celebrated the memories of yesteryear during County Stadium's amazing farewell party. With the greatest one-game gathering in team history, 56,354 fans said goodbye and caught one last glimpse of 48 living legends who played and won championships for the Braves, Brewers and Packers. The closing ceremony, illuminated by thousands of flashbulbs popping, lasted 101 minutes and concluded with the special eulogy by Bob Uecker as each light standard systematically went dark. Moments later fireworks lit up Miller Park beyond a rousing salute to Milwaukee's future.

The euphoria carried over with the christening of Miller Park in 2001. A Wisconsin sports' record 2.8 million fans filled the new ballpark in just its first year. It wasn't too long after that benchmark was established that it too was eclipsed by an unfathomable three million spectators in back-to-back seasons.

Miller Park guaranteed that a baseball would be played as scheduled, regardless of weather.

During that inaugural season, the sight of the multi-panel roof opening and closing to the music of Richard Strauss' 'Sprach Zarathustra,' better known as the theme song to the motion picture classic '2001: A Space Odyssey,' was breathtaking to see and well worth the price of admission.

More than 24 million spectators packed Miller Park during the decade, twice as many as the franchise's first decade and a third more than during its winningest decade of the 1980s. That fan-advantage sent shockwaves through the sports world that Milwaukee was indeed a big-league town.

This period was also marked by the passing of the ownership baton. The franchise's turning point came in 2004 when Mark Attanasio purchased the Brewers and the prospects of better days were in the foreseeable future. His arrival coincided with an uptick in the farm system's talent pool engineered by General Manager Doug Melvin and his staff.

On the field, the decade of the 2000s celebrated the awesome firepower of an explosive offense. More home runs were hit by the Brewers during this 10-year span than the previous decades, including those of the Bambi's Bombers and Harvey's Wallbangers eras.

The 2000s opened with Richie Sexson, who hit 45 home runs in a season twice, equaling Gorman Thomas' single-season record count back in 1979.

But before the decade came to a close, Prince Fielder would set a new standard by reaching 50 home runs in 2007. He then followed that mark with 46 homers two years later. Fielder also put his stamp on the Brewers' RBI record which had stood for 26 years until he shattered it by driving in 141 runs in 2009.

The decade also welcomed the arrival of Ryan Braun who took the league by storm in 2007 and became only the second Brewer named Rookie of the Year. He closed out the decade by collecting 203 hits in 2009, joining Cecil Cooper, Paul Molitor and Robin Yount as the only Brewers to ever surpass the 200-hit threshold.

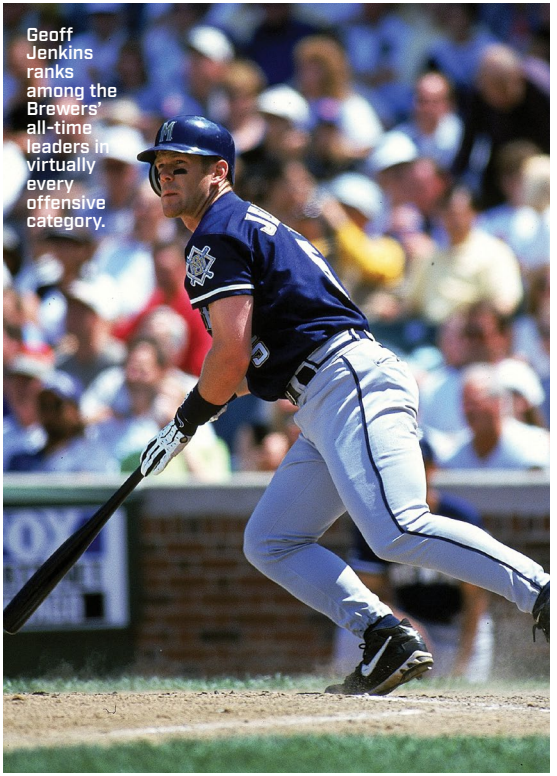

Others made an impact during the decade included Geoff Jenkins and Ben Sheets.

Jenkins spent 10 seasons with the Brewers – one of only 14 players to ever suit up at least that long ➜

BREWERS DECADE WEEKENDS

To commemorate the Golden Anniversary at American Family Field, special Brewers Decade Weekends are being planned. These designated weekends will feature themed music and entertainment. The celebratory weekends mark appearances by Brewers alumni. Fans can purchase tickets for the Saturday games in Section 232, affectionately named "True Blue Brew Crew" as a tribute to the original bleachers section at County Stadium. Fans in this section receive a unique section T-shirt and signs.

Geoff Jenkins ranks among the Brewers' all-time leaders in virtually every offensive category.

In 2004, Ben Sheets set the franchise record by striking out 264 batters, including a single-game mark of 18 strikeouts against the Braves.

and the first player post-1995. Jenkins was among the Brewers' all-time leaders in virtually every offensive category. He hit 20-or-more homers in a season seven times while driving in 90-or-more runs three times.

Sheets began the decade leading the USA to a gold medal in baseball at the Olympics in Sydney, Australia. He made his big-league debut the following year. In 2004, he set a team record with 18 strikeouts against the Braves at Miller Park on May 16, finishing the season with a single-season record of 264 strikeouts. He posted 10 or more wins in his first five seasons before recording a personal best of 13 wins in 2008. Sheets became the first Brewer named to four All-Star teams and the only one to ever start in a Midsummer Classic.

The decade also produced some other great performances, including Scott Podsednik stealing 70 bases in 2004 joining Tommy Harper, who set the bar with 73 steals in 1969, as the only players to swipe that many bases.

In 2004, Lyle Overbay set a franchise record with 53 doubles – equaled 10 years later ➜

In 2008, CC Sabathia went 11-2 in leading the Brewers to their first postseason appearance in 26 years.

by Jonathan Lucroy.

Corey Hart was the first Brewer to ever hit at least 20 home runs with 20 stolen bases while hitting safely in 22 straight games in a season, accomplishing the feat in 2007. And he's the only one to repeat it, hitting safely in 20 consecutive games three years later.

In 2005, Chris Capuano won 18 games, topped only by 20-game winners Jim Colborn (1973), Mike Caldwell (1978) and Teddy Higuera (1986).

The decade also produced four of the top closers in franchise history with Trevor Hoffman earning 37 saves in 2009, Dan Kolb and Derrick Turnbow each earning 39 saves in 2004 and '05, respectively, and Francisco Cordero chalking up 44 saves in 2007.

Perhaps the most memorable pitching deed of the decade was mastered by CC Sabathia, who in only 17 starts in a Brewers uniform won 11 of 13 decisions in 2008. He won his first nine decisions including a near-miss no-hitter at Pittsburgh. His finest performance came in the season finale when he went the distance for a victory over the Cubs at Miller Park securing the Brewers' first playoff berth in 26 years. Milwaukee earned its first National League Wild Card berth as the team posted its first 90-win campaign since 1992.

The momentum continued to build as the Brewers prepared to take the next step in the following decade.
